The best part about practicing law is building relationships with clients. I enjoy analyzing the unique issues my clients face and partnering with them to find practical solutions to each challenge that arises. Whether I am advising a local government body, negotiating a contract, facilitating a real estate transaction or litigating a case in court, my approach is the same. First and foremost, I seek to understand my clients' goals. I then tailor my legal advice and help strategize a plan of action that is centered around achieving those objectives as efficiently as possible.

When I am not working, I am busy (along with my wife) raising our three young children. We are privileged to live on acreage in the country and enjoy spending as much time outdoors together as possible playing in the woods, sledding, and going for walks and bike rides. My newest hobby (though my wife might call it an obsession) is tapping the maple trees on our property and producing delicious maple syrup! Other hobbies include hiking, camping, hunting, fishing, gardening, and game nights with friends and family.
